Candidates in the 2014 local elections in the Spanish city of Valencia have been posing for photos with eggs with their faces on them. The eggs were thrown at politicians in the run-up to Spain's regional elections on Sunday. The eggs are supposed to be symbolic of the eggs thrown at a Socialist member of parliament on November 10, 2014. The member of parliament, Dolores "Lola" Buxeta, is a member of the Basque separatist group ETA. "Neither the Catalan capital nor the Valencian small village-wide egging of Socialist Antonio Selba are either recent or isolated occurrences, nor is the use of the eggs in the different campaigns as innocent novelty," an online blog post from Die Multimedia says. The post added that eggs were thrown at a pro-independence politician in the Valencian town of Mataró at the beginning of 2015.
