NextGen Widget Encrypt is an open-source, cross-platform PGP encryption utility with additional features. The application makes use of the NextGen Widget library to handle file encryption and QR code/X509 certificate generation. The application works great, just be aware of the pro and con of each aspect of it. Pro: Batch file encryption is one of the great features of the app, so it will fit right into your everyday life. You can use it anywhere. Added a feature that allows you to quickly encrypt/decrypt by line of text. You can also encrypt/decrypt as much as you want at once. It is a great utility for Android devices. You can use it from the desktop as well. Con: It can't do multi-file encryption, only one file at a time. It is not a mobile app, so if you want to use it on the go, it won't work for you. It is missing some features you would normally expect from the likes of PGP and other similar programs. You can't export the key pair locally, so you will need to go to a key server to back it up. Published on Dec 24, 2017 PGP (Pretty Good Privacy) is one of the most well-known algorithms in cryptography, based on a public-private key pair to encrypt and decrypt data securely. Relying on the OpenPGP standard, NextGen Widget Encrypt brings to the table an implementation of the PGP standard that enables users to encrypt files, folders, and text pieces, while also providing tools for secure data wiping and QR code generation. Generate a key pair in seconds Upon the launch of NextGen Widget Encrypt, users are asked to create a username and a master password, which will have to be provided each time the application is used. Before anything else, you must navigate to the "Compose key" section in the main menu to generate your key pair. This mandatory step could be a little more intuitive; for instance, the application could either open this section directly or block access to all the other sections unless at least one key pair is generated. Based on a custom name and an email address, the application generates the key pair and saves it to the key store automatically. Each key pair can be attached several sub-keys, generated using either the RSA, the DH/DSS, or Anyone can see what your app is up to and what it's doing. Doesn't your app need to be able to read and change your phone's settings?

Q: merge two array in php

I have this two array `$array1 = array(1,2,3,4,5,6,7,8,9,10,11,12,13,14,15);` `$array2 = array(5,6,7,8,9,10,11,12,13,14,15,16,17,18,19);` I want to make this one array.

`$array3 = array(1,2,3,4,5,6,7,8,9,10,11,12,13,14,15,16,17,18,19);` I have used `array_merge_recursive`, but I'm getting this. `$array3 =`
